Social Workers in Integrated Health Care: A Job Preview Video

"Social Workers in Integrated Health Care", a job preview video created by the Integrated Health Scholars Program (IHSP) at the University of Kansas School of Social Welfare, is now available for viewing at www.socwel.ku.edu/ihsp.

This brief (6 minute) video conveys key aspects of what it is social workers do in integrated health care settings. The video defines integrated health care, highlights the unique role and a "typical" day for social workers who work in integrated health care, and identifies the impact that social workers can make in these settings. The video contains actual patients and interprofessional providers as credible, engaging sources in sharing their experiences and perspectives. The purpose is to educate students and others about this growing area of practice and to recruit and retain social workers to the field of integrated health care.

Our special thanks goes to the two Federally Qualified Health Centers (one rural and one urban) that offered their space and providers for filming: Community Health Center of Southeast Kansas and HealthCore Clinic. Thanks also goes to the patients and providers who shared their experiences with us, as well as, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) who funded this project through a Behavioral Health Workforce Education and Training cooperative agreement. The content and perspectives are those of the participants and should not be construed as the official position or policy of HRSA.

Directed by: Michelle Levy and Jason Matejkowski, co-PIs, IHSP
Produced by: Treetop Productions

Integrated Health Scholars Program
University of Kansas School of Social Welfare www.socwel.ku.edu/ihsp